November 4: TEXAS LULLABY a song of ghosts

According to Production Weekly, John (SHADOW OF THE VAMPIRE) Malkovich, Ellen Barkin, Alison Lohman (pictured) and Bruce Willis have signed on to star in TEXAS LULLABY, a ghostly feature to be helmed by commercials director Malcom Venville. Written by Steve Allison, whose previous credits include the non-genre films LOVE IS THE DRUG and COMING OUT, the independent TEXAS LULLABY is set in the small town of Lemarque, TX, and (according to the site) features "plenty of Lone Star beer and barbecue sauce to offset the stench of blood."

Reveals the site of the film's plot: "After the sudden death of Cletus (Willis), and his mother's (Barkin) unexpected marriage to his uncle Sheriff Tanner Telmah (Malkovich), young Adair Telmah is confused and depressed. And when his father's ghost appears to him, claiming that he's been murdered by Tanner, Adair is baffled to the point of madness by the goal of vengeance set for him by his dead daddy."

Lohman, whose sole previous genre credit is the 1998 Full Moon cheapie KRAAI! THE SEA MONSTER, will portray Adair's girlfriend Opal Coals. Principal photography is set to commence in Texas and Shreveport, LA in mid-December. Stay tuned to Fango for further developments. —Sean Decker
